About the Beer

BLACK CREEK HISTORIC BREWERY

The oldest know recipe on earth is recipe for beer. All things considered, it's a pretty simple drink and the ingredients haven't changed much: water, malted barley (or some other grain, such as wheat), hops and yeast. The art of brewing lies in slight variations in temperature, timing or ingredients. This is how we get the many different varieties of beer available today.

Black Creek Historic Brewery uses only natural ingredients. Other than hops, (originally introduced as a preservative), the beers include no artificial additives or preservatives. The beers are fermented in real wooden barrels.

Black Creek Dark Ale is a full-bodied brown ale. This drink is characterized by a warm caramel chocolate flavour derived from the roasted malts used to make it. Black Creek Dark Ale is a perfect complement to sharp cheeses, meats or roasted vegetables at any time of the year.

Black Creek Pale Ale uses predominantly pale or lightly-roasted malts. This beer has a full, airy taste with more hops than darker ales. Black Creek Pale Ale is a great choice with salads or spicy foods, or as a cool refreshment in warm weather.

Black Creek Porter is a dark-coloured beer based on the original porters, developed in the 1750s. Porter has a heavier flavour and aroma and a slightly sweet taste. Its name probably originates in the belief that this strong, nourishing drink was ideal for hard-working porters and labourers. Black Creek Porter is wonderful on its own, or with salty snacks.

Black Creek India Pale Ale was first brewed in England in the 18th century and was much more heavily hopped than most ales to ensure it did not go bad on the long voyage to supply the British troops in India. Black Creek India Pale Ale has a crisp, noticeably hoppy flavour and is a delicious on warm summer days.

Other Beers

Through the year, Black Creek Historic Brewery will be crafting other beers on site including Black Creek Amber Ale, Black Creek Double Stout, Black Creek Brilliant, a Barley Wine (with 9% alcohol content) and Black Creek Mild (with just 3% alcohol content).
